East Third Street Will Get Black-Top Pavement in Near Future

Council Goes Into Action at Special Session Tuesday

Immediate Construction of Three Blocks Ordered

WORK ON DETAILS

Thomas, Young, Confer With Construction Officials

The Hope city council, called into special session late Tuesday afternoon, made definite plans for the immediate improvement of East Third street, beginning at the end of Highway 67 and extending three blocks west.

All members of the council were present with the exception of Alderman J. R. Williams, who was ill and unable to attend.

Action of the city council in making plans for the construction project was quickly approved by the Board of Public Affairs.

Alderman E. P. Young and City Engineer Charles O. Thomas were authorized by the council to work out details of the project. Mr. Thomas and Mr. Young left Hope Wednesday morning for Little Rock where they were to confer with construction officials.

Just when actual work will get underway and details of the construction of the road will be determined at Little Rock, and will be announced upon the return of the two city representatives.

Under the plan discussed by the council Tuesday afternoon, city water mains will be lowered considerably in an effort to eliminate to a large extent the breakage of mains caused by heavy traffic over the road—due to the present shallow depth.

A spokesman for the council said the project would include new construction at the base of the road for a distance of three blocks—and not merely "patch" work, which has been tried unsuccessfully in the past.

The road, long in need of repair, has been the frequent scene of accidents, the most serious occurring last Sunday night when two automobiles of Barksdale Field, Shreveport, La., were painfully injured.

Several weeks ago a petition signed by several hundred Hope citizens was presented to the council requesting pavement and also widening of the street.

In the meantime several plans were discussed, the latest one being adopted by the council at its special session Tuesday afternoon in which details were to be worked out by City Engineer Thomas, Alderman E. P. Young and construction officials at Little Rock.

Local Shipment of Handles in War Zone

More than 17 tons of Hope-manufactured handles, the bulk of them consigned to Oslo, capital of Norway, and the balance to Sweden and Denmark, are now in the war zone with their fate unknown, officials of Bruner Ivory Handle company disclosed Wednesday.

There are seven consignments totaling 55,050 pounds, seven of them carried by the steamer Trafalgar, and two by the steamer Tulane, both of Norwegian registration. The Tulane left New Orleans March 13, and the Trafalgar left New Orleans March 28.

It was regarded unlikely that any of the shipments would get through since the German seizure of Norway, the capital city of Oslo being already occupied; and it was considered probable to the British would take over the handles themselves to keep the Germans from getting them. The Bruner Ivory company has extensive dealings with the British dominions, Australia and New Zealand, as well as Scotland, being important export outlets of the local concern.

The itemized list of Bruner-Ivory shipments follows:

- To Markt & Co., Oslo, Norway, 21,356 pounds, in S. S. Trafalgar.
- To A. B. Odellberg & Olson, Stockholm, Sweden, through Gothenburg, Sweden, 10,925 pounds, in S. S. Trafalgar.
- To Markt & Co., Gothenburg, Sweden, 1,500 pounds, in S. S. Trafalgar.
- To Markt & Co., Copenhagen, Denmark, 6,811 pounds, in S. S. Trafalgar.
- To Markt & Co., Copenhagen, Denmark, 4,528 pounds, in S. S. Trafalgar.
- To A. B. Odellberg & Olson, Stockholm, through Gothenburg, Sweden, 9,000 pounds, in S. S. Tulane.
- To Paul Borghaus & Co., Gothenburg, Sweden, 330 pounds, in S. S. Tulane.

Merchants' Problems Will Be Discussed in Detail

Henry W. Stanley, manager of the Hot Springs chamber of commerce, will be guest speaker at a merchants' and members meeting and banquet of the Hope chamber of commerce at the Barlow hotel Monday night, April 15th.

Mr. Stanley was for several years manager of the merchants' division of the Dallas chamber of commerce, in which capacity he visited all the large towns and cities in the Dallas trade territory conducting merchandizing schools.

He was later selected to have charge of tourist trade and conventions for the Pittsburg, Pa., chamber of commerce, where he served with distinction until recently when he was elected manager of the strongest chamber of commerce in the state at Hot Springs.

Mr. Stanley is a very interesting speaker and is in demand all over the country.

Within the last month he has spoken in Nashville, Tennessee, Little Rock, Arkansas, and Monroe, Louisiana. While he is a specialist in merchandizing, he is interested in all phases of chamber of commerce work and his talk will be along general lines of civic development with special reference to the problems of the merchant.

American Gold Policy Produces War, and Will End in Panic, Says John T. Flynn

Sprinkled from the shores of New York's East River to bayside in San Francisco is the greatest hoard of gold in the world—18 1/4 billion dollars worth. Along with nearly four billion in silver, it forms the major part of the metallic wealth of the U. S. In eight closely guarded vaults, spotted on map, the piles of gold and silver continue to grow with U. S. imports and purchases of the valuable metals.

Ruling Appealed by Utility Body

Early Decision Asked for Permit to Gas Firm

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The state utilities commission appealed to the supreme court a decision of Pulaski Circuit Judge Lawrence Auten voiding its December 22 order authorizing the Louisiana-Nevada Transit company to compete with the Arkansas Louisiana Gas company in Southwest Arkansas.

The state tribunal next Monday will be asked to advance the case on its docket as a matter of public interest to insure final adjudication before the court starts its summer vacation July 8.

Meanwhile, the commission resumed after a 10-day recess, a hearing into rates charged by the Arkansas Louisiana company, major distributor of natural gas in this state. Lon Cearley chief accountant for the commission, was on the stand throughout the day.

In a detailed analysis of the corporate history of the company, he said that in transfers and mergers there had been inflation in the firm's books of plant values. Cearley said in preparing his exhibit on financial structure he had not "used these write ups" but had used values he contended were based on "proper costs."

Counsel for the Arkansas Louisiana entered numerous objections as the expert testified, being overruled in most instances.

Flynn Wants to Know Why We Keep on Paying $35 Ounce for Gold Worth Only $20.67

By JOHN T. FLYNN
NEA Service Special Correspondent

Little by little all the gold in the world is drifting into the United States. And many people ask—what is the use of it? What is the effect on the rest of the world? And how is it going to end?

Let's answer the last question first. It is probably going to end in one of the strangest and greatest currency crises in modern history.

There is about $25,000,000,000 of gold in the world. We have just about $15,500,000,000 of it in this country. There is another billion and a half, but it is not ours—merely stored here for the account of foreign countries. But with $18,500,000,000 you will see that we have around 75 per cent of the world's gold.

How long will it take to get the rest of it? Well, we had $8,000,000,000 in 1934 when we devalued. Thus we have averaged a gain of $1,500,000,000 a year. If we were to keep that up we would have it all in about four years. If the war continues any length of time, in spite of anything they may do, we will get so much of their gold that, for all practical purposes, speaking in terms of gold, they will be broke.

Contradiction in Policy
Why does this gold come here? First, because trade balances have been in our favor; second, because foreign investors have sent their funds here for investment; but principally because Uncle Sam, under the President's gold purchase plan, literally stands in the markets of the world and offers to buy all gold offered to him at $35 an ounce. The price before we started that strange policy was $20.67 an ounce. As a result we are getting more than all the new gold produced and much of the existing supply.

But here is an interesting question: Why does this gold come here? ### Bicycle Clubs Organized in Local Schools by the Police

Sergeant Haynie and Police Chief Copeland Stress Safety Rules — 181 Members Are Enrolled in Club

The Hope police department, working in cooperation with the Arkansas state police department, has organized bicycle clubs in both Oglesby and the junior and senior high schools here as a means of teaching safety habits and rules to the future drivers of automobiles in Arkansas.

The bicycle club at present has a total enrollment of 181 members. Sergeant Finis Haynie of the state police department listed the aims of the club as follows:

1. To build and encourage in the child the correct attitude toward the traffic problem.
2. To teach the responsibility toward themselves and others, of owning a means of transportation.
3. To cause the child to be willing to participate in community action for the safety of all.
4. To teach the child how to care for his bicycle and keep it in a safe riding condition.
5. To teach these laws and safe riding habits which are necessary for the safe riding of bicycles.
6. To provide activities for the use of the above knowledge and skills in order that they become habits of safety.

5 Nazi Cruisers Sunk?

NEW YORK—(AP)—A London broadcast, picked up by NBC Wednesday, quoted an admiralty announcement that the British navy had sunk five of the eight cruisers which Germany had at the start of the war.

silenced Britain had lost two destroyers, suffered damage to two, and claimed to have sunk one German craft and left three "heavily hit and burning."

Prime Minister Chamberlain presented the story of the battle to a press conference in the House of Commons. He stated it was a British victory, declaring six merchant ships believed to be carrying supplies for the Germans were sunk, and the German ammunition ship Ravensfeldt was blown up.

The two British destroyers lost were the Hunter and Hardy. In the French Senate, Premier Paul Reynaud said: "A great battle is going on in the North Sea."

There was no British or other confirmation of this report. British naval sources pointed out the heavy damage to German destroyers as announced Wednesday morning would make the port extremely vulnerable to a renewed attack by a fresh British force.

A Maginot Line Against Malaria

Dramatic are the accounts of desperate air forays over the North Sea. Men fight, and men die in a quick blurt of machine gun fire and a swift plunge into the sea.
But in Brazil there is a battle no less dramatic, battle not to kill but to save; not for death, but for life. It is a relentless war to exterminate the anopheles gambiae, a dread malaria-carrying mosquito brought from Africa to Brazil about 10 years ago. Scientists are not given to hysteria. But Dr. M. A. Barber, distinguished malarialist, states his considered belief that "this invasion of gambiae threatens the Americas with a catastrophe in comparison with which ordinary pestilence, conflagration and even war are but small and temporary calamities." Once given a foothold, this malarial strain would enter the very veins of a country and plague it for centuries. No other country having normal intercourse with it would be safe. Untold millions of lives may be at stake in this battle.
The government of Brazil declared war on this malaria peril. The Rockefeller Foundation rushed to help with $100,000 in 1939, and $200,000 in 1940. Foundation and government are working closely together.
Throughout early 1939 it was a losing battle. Untrained personnel, wet weather, bad breaks, forced the defenders to retire before the deadly mosquito. Widespread epidemics with more than 16,000 people treated for severe cases, followed. Defense forces brought up their reserves.
More than 2000 doctors, technicians, scouts, inspectors and guards were rushed into the front lines. Frontiers of the infested region were marked by fumigation posts, a medical Maginot line. Breeding places in stagnant water were eliminated. Plane roared overhead, mapping with the camera unsuspected breeding places. Houses, automobiles, boats were halted and sprayed.
The advance of the deadly mosquito has been halted. But now another rainy season impends. The offensive must be launched again with redoubled vigor. This is a war to the death, for until the last surviving pair of gambiae is dead, millions of people in the Western Hemisphere can not be safe.
Such a campaign, such a war, is worthy of mankind, showing him at his best, just as wars among men show him at his worst.
Strange indeed is man, who can fight so gallantly to save men's lives, and in the same moment strive so savagely to kill.
Twenty-three Vice-Presidents of the United States were of English descent.

RIGHT OR WRONG ABOUT PEOPLE

By DONALD A. LAIRD
Ph. D., S.C.D.
Author of "How to Improve Your Brain Power"
Should We Tell a Man His Necktie Is Crooked?
Most people, after all, are kind and have good intentions. It is perfectly natural to have an impulse to tell a man that his necktie is hanging around toward one ear and needs to be straightened, or to break the news to a society matron that her slip is dragging the sidewalk on her left side. While the milk of human kindness runs freely, human nature is also overrun with the witwings of embarrassment, or the acid of disappointed vanity.
A quick way to become unpopular with people is to tell them know their vests are buttoned crooked, hair mussed, faces smudged, or that anything else is wrong with their personal appearances.
Clothes and appearance in general get a great deal of careful attention, and while the dishevelments of appearance are nevertheless real, it is a reflection on them. This is in addition to the embarrassment of feeling that many others have been laughing at them. All in all, it is not a comfortable situation to be in.
The person pointing out the dishevelment is, of course, not to blame for the clothes being crooked or the smudge on the cheek. But he is likely to be included in the feeling of embarrassment, which overwhelms the person he tries to help. Some disheveled people foolishly get down-right angry at those who tell them a necktie is hanging on one ear.
Don't laugh in the face of a disheveled person, and don't tell him about something being askew. Let some other Good Samaritan break the news—save your kindly impulse for glad tidings.
Married life, too, would be much pleasanter for many couples if husbands would not comment about the peculiar hats selected by the little woman. For the same reason, the smart private secretary does not tell her boss about his vest being up one button too high.
It's too bad human nature is such that good intentions are often their own reward. Good intentions should be tempered with good judgement.

Fighting Nations

Said the sailor to the soldier: "Once again we're on the sea. In that twenty year revival known as 'War with Germany'." Once again we're running convoy to some trans-Atlantic line. And hoping we'll be lucky and not bump into a mine." Said the soldier to the sailor: once again in mud we stand. On the borders of that country which is known as No-Man's Land. But when generals and colonels turn their heads the other way. The men of either army have a game they like to play. Said the sailor to the soldier: "I suppose it has to be. If you buy yourself a warship how it works you'll want to see." Said the soldier to the sailor: "That's the truth beyond a doubt. But at times I wish they'd tell us what's the shooting all about." —Selected.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Galloway, who have resided in our city for the past 15 months, will leave Thursday for residence in Kansas City, Mo., where Mrs. Galloway will continue in the employment of the Railway Express.

The guests were introduced as follows: Mrs. Gus Haynes introduced Mrs. W. R. Hamilton, Miss Farmer and Mrs. Sid Henry. The president's message was read by Mrs. Searcy and Mrs. Charles Locke read a most interesting article on Americanism, which was preceded with the song, "America The Beautiful" by the chapter. The luncheon table was an exquisite expression of spring, with its large central adornment, a crystal bowl filled to overflowing with purple and white iris and white spirea, placed on a large round mirror. Lovely pansy corsages marked the covers laid for chapter members and guests. The next meeting will be held on May 7th, with Mrs. J. J. Battle, Mrs.

H. M. Dobson, Mrs. M. C. Butler and Miss Mary Catts as hostesses, with Mrs. J. M. Houston leading the program on "Colonial Gardens and Colonial Glassware."

Two Solicitations

"Dear Major Bartlett: Representatives of the Salvation Army from Texarkana, El Dorado and Hot Springs have been collecting money in Hope for the support of the organization. Our people here are very loyal to the Salvation Army but not that loyal. Please advise which one of these towns is supposed to collect funds here, also instruct the towns which should not to discontinue. "With best wishes for the Salvation Army and its continued success, I am Yours very truly, "R. P. Bowen, Secretary Hope Chamber of Commerce." Bouterse's Letter "Mr. R. P. Bowen, Secretary, "Hope Chamber of Commerce, "Hope, Arkansas. "My Dear Mr. Bowen: "Major W. H. Bartlett of New Orleans has forwarded to me a copy of your letter and his reply regarding solicitation for Salvation Army funds in your city. We have an arbitrary division of territory for Salvation Army solicitation. It happens that Hope is under the jurisdiction of Hot Springs. Although it is nearer Texarkana, the Salvation Army in that city has promised not to solicit in Hope. "This is one of our common administration problems. Salvationists from various cities get on to each other's territory. You can feel assured that all of the funds donated go directly to Salvation Army work, although I agree with you that it is annoying to have solicitations. If you can give your support to Hot Springs we shall appreciate it. "Very sincerely yours, "Major W. W. Bouterse "Divisional Commander, Louisville, Ky."

Bicycle Clubs

has made several talks to the schools in relation to organization of the local bicycle club.

Besides the safety phase, members of the club are required to sign a card giving a complete description of the bicycle he owns. These cards are filed with the local police department—and in the event a bicycle is stolen—police may thumb through their files and obtain quickly a complete description of the bicycle. This method should aid materially in reducing theft of bicycles here.

Mr. Copeland said members of the club were required to sign and observe the following rules:

1. I will always stay on the extreme right-hand side of the road and be always watching out for other traffic.
2. I will never carry a passenger on the handle bars or on the seat back of me.
3. I will never "hitch" on to any moving vehicle.
4. I will not cross an intersection.

Folks in Elizabeth, N. J. thought they were hearing things when they saw a flock of birds flying around, apparently caroling like canaries. But their ears weren't deceiving them. ## Launched to Aid

Why do we do this? I have many times asked people that question. I seldom can find anyone who remembers why we do it. It was started in 1933 when the President announced that he was going to create a market for farm products. Our export farm surpluses must be sold abroad.

To accomplish that the President took the advice of the late Professor Warren of Cornell, an Englishman, to buy wheat here, must pay for it in dollars. Hence he must buy dollars first. He buys dollars by exchanging his own currency for dollars in the exchange market. The more dollars he can buy for his pounds the more wheat he can buy.

So by reducing the amount of gold in the dollar the President was told that foreigners could buy more dollars for their currencies and would thus be enabled to buy more grain and this would tend to move our surpluses out of the market.

That was the chief reason, although the President did say it was a start toward a managed currency. The plan, of course, was a complete failure. Our farm surpluses are greater than ever; our foreign market for them worse than ever. And, of course, no one ever hears any more about a managed currency. But, for some reason, we go on buying gold at $35 an ounce, although the reasons have vanished.

The great question then is—are we doing ourselves any harm by this? The answer must be yes.

First of all, we are inflicting a terrible injury upon foreign countries. Their money troubles have much to do with their economic troubles, which are at the bottom of their wars.

Second, taking their gold his way tends to make them establish trade barriers in order to cut down the extent of their buying here. Because if they lose gold both by buying and by our gold drainage, they will soon have none.

But most serious is the prospect of what will happen when foreign gold reserves, after another two or three years, become even, more seriously depleted. The only effect will be a currency crisis which we have deliberately created because we are unwilling to look a crazy policy straight in the face and correct it.

Catalog Provided List of Symptoms in Days of Yours

Some day the historians are going to write about Americans from 1900 to 1940, and when they do, they had better consult David L. Cohn's unique and rollicking social document, "The Good Old Days" (Simon and Schuster: $3.75). This is no less than a record of the times as revealed in the pages of bulky Sears Roebuck catalogs. Here is America—everything—from music to manners, morals and men's furnishings. Whether or not you've ever waited at a rural mailbox for one of these Sears "bibles," you'll find nostalgic delight in Cohn's hefty story. Remember the patent medicine days?

Everybody has a heart. Hence the heart offered a rich field for medicine men. The catalog's contribution to the ills of the heart was:

"Wonder Heart Cure or, Dr. Echol's Australian Auricle." But how is one to know whether one has heart trouble? It was easy enough merely look up the symptoms in the catalog. "In order that one may determine if the heart is affected, we ask attention to the following list of symptoms which denote heart disease: 1. Fluttering of the pulse. 2. Palpitation of the heart. 3. Shortness of breath. 4. Tenderness and sudden, pains on the left side. 5. Dreaming of falling from a height. 6. Inability to sleep upon the left side. 7. Fainting or swooning spells. 8. Dropsy. 9. Sudden starting in the sleep and noises in the ears.

"In the simple descriptions of these symptoms, we have included the facts whereby heart trouble is recognized."

These symptoms might also have been caused by a lumpy mattress, bedbugs, and underdone pork chops, an abscessed tooth, or an overdue loan at the bank, but since the Wonder Heart Cure was a "safe scientific remedy . . . which acts upon the nerves, membranous linings and valves of nature's life pump, the heart," it was better to play safe with Australian Auricle. The purchaser risked nothing but his health, because, if he was not satisfied with the medicine, Sears would cheerfully refund the purchase price.

Brinks, a kind of bridle constructed of iron bands, was used to punish sallow women in England in the middle ages.

Dreams? ...well maybe...

Where did each great achievement actually start? Wasn't it with an idea? What if Edison had not dreamed of the first electric lamp? What if Fulton had not dreamed of the steamboat? Such dreams are priceless. Properly directed daydreams are as valuable as work itself . . . often times providing the spark that gives the whole nation new conveniences and opportunities, thus putting millions to work.

Speaking of ideas, millions of people have found it a good idea to have Budweiser available for their hours of relaxation. It helps them to become the Perfect Host to a host of friends who prefer it—and it has been wisely said that friends often direct our destinies.

Get Out That Pole, It Is Fishin' Time

April Is Month Tall Story Tellers Wind Up

AP Feature Service

WASHINGTON — April comes in appropriately with All Pools Day for this is the month when the tall tales . . . it's fishing season again. And no one but a fisherman is foolish enough to believe some of the fabulous stories about the one that got away.

Many states, particularly in the East and Middle Atlantic sections, opened their lakes and streams to trout fishermen this month. In other parts of the land anglers are getting their rods and reels out of closets and readying them for the beginning of open seasons in their localities.

The fishermen are just as anxious and optimistic as ever, for the sale of fishing licenses probably will pass the 10,000,000 mark again this season.

Pay Plenty For Thrills

It's hard to believe that American fishermen spend nearly $1,000,000 a day, during the season. But that's the price they pay for their sport when you figure the costs of licenses, equipment, transportation, food, hotels, lodges, etc.

These anglers range from kiddies barely big enough to hold a light pole to the western angler who admits to more than 90 years.

The cost of fishing depends on the thickness of your pocketbook. Some folks use equipment costing little more than a few cents, while others go in for elaborate and expensive tackle. Often the chap with the home-made material has better luck than the fellow with the store-bought paraphernalia.

Fishermen will argue all day about every phase of the sport but many admit that luck plays a major part in angling success. Fishing really is simple: It's just a matter of finding the fish, giving them what they want in the manner they want it and when they want it.

If the fish isn't interested you can try to tempt him all morning with the finest of lures and he won't even make a faint strike. One point on which most anglers are agreed is that the fisherman should stay out of sight of the trout he wants to take.

The argument over the goodness of hatchery fish still rages. Some regard hatchery-reared fish as sissies. Others say that hatchery methods in recent years have produced a fish that is just as full of fight as those which grew up in the streams. Anyway, the work of state and federal conservation agencies in restocking streams and lakes and in improving living conditions for the fish has greatly increased the population of the fishing spots and resulted in better luck for the anglers.

So, whenever you can't locate your pal at his store or office during the next few weeks it's a pretty good bet that you can find him at his favorite fishing spot.

"Glass Snakes" Are Lizards

So-called "glass snakes" really are lizards, belonging to the Genus Ophisaurus. Covered in hard, shingle-like plates, their habit of breaking to pieces is limited to separating themselves from their tails, a custom common among other lizards.

Safety Council in Meeting Tuesday

Seven Minor Accidents in Five Industrial Plants

At the regular monthly meeting of the Hope Industrial Safety Council at the Chamber of Commerce office Tuesday, seven minor accidents were reported in five of our largest industrial plants during the month of March, causing a loss of 194 hours out of a total of more than 88,000 hours worked, or a loss of one hour for each 453 hours worked.

After receiving the reports from the plants, the causes of the accidents were discussed and means of preventing their recurrence. Blaine Elington, Manager of the State Employment Office in Hope, made a talk on the value of safety programs and how they had reduced accidents more than 80 per cent on railroads.

The council is composed of the safety foremen of the plants represented and are:

Ted Hendricks, Hope Basket Company; L. H. Rogers, Gunter Lumber Company; Henry Gray, Hope Handling Company; H. C. Hicks, Union Compress & Warehouse Company; and R. O. Byard, Bruner-Ivory Handling Company. W. C. Bruner and Curtis Urrey also attended the meeting Tuesday.

K. O. CAVALIER BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

YESTERDAY: Playing checkers, Eddie told Val why he took up fighting, talks of his plans for the future. The tension between them eases slightly and Val ends himself strangely disturbed as she tells to know Eddie better.

CHAPTER XII

THE weather became rougher as they nosed north past Cape Haggerty. It was a dull, leaden dawn that broke over the Pacific, and Val noticed through the port-hole that it was impossible to penetrate the mist for more than 75 feet. Steve Hansen must have been on the bridge all night, she figured.

When she stepped outside her cabin the wind almost knocked her flat. Gratefully, she grabbed one of the lines that had been strung along the deck for support. It was treacherous, slippery going and every time the bow of the Northern Belle pitched deep into a cavernous trough of water, Val had to stop and hang on grimly.

She virtually had to fight her way up to the bridge, "Hi, Stevie," she greeted Hansen. "Nice day to fly a kite, what?"

"You ought to go below and stay there," he answered. "This is unusually dirty weather for this time o' year and I don't like it, nohow. No sir, I don't."

Val looked up into the sky. "Looks like we're going to have a lot of water above and below us pretty soon."

"More'n might be good for us," he muttered. "The barometer has been droppin' like a ton o' lead. Tell you what you do, honey. Have Wong Lee send me up a pot o' coffee and a couple sandwiches and have Barney MacGregor see that everything's shipshape in the hold. Might anchor that mining gear a little more, too. Can't afford to have any of that stuff break loose."

SHE bumped into Pop Grimes coming up the companionway. "How's Kelso getting on?" she asked.

Pop grinned. "Sick as ever. He swears we've been half way around the world by now. I tell him it's only been four days, and he calls me a liar."

"We'll be in Prince Rupert tomorrow night. Maybe that'll cheer him up."

She was the kind of girl, Eddie thought, who probably had a dozen or more guys clattering up her doorstep. Guys with a lot of dough and a lot of spare time to spend it. Guys who played polo, maybe, and belonged to two or three country clubs. Guys who had a little blue in their blood.

After all, he told himself, her work took her among people like him up."

"And you can also tell him I received a wire from our San Francisco office. They've persuaded the boxing commission to rescind their order on that $5000 bond. That ought to bring him right out of his bunk."

When Barney MacGregor took Mike Kelly, Eddie Cavalier and another man down in the hold she went along with them. She watched silently as they threw more ropes around the mining gear and secured everything lightly.

"Where do you go from here?" she asked Eddie after a few minutes.

"Back to the galley, of course. Wong says he can't release me until you give him the word."

"I can't do that," she replied somewhat impishly. "Be bad for discipline and general morale. But I will give you a hand, though. C'mon."

She was opening a can of asparagus when the ship lurched heavily. It threw her off balance slightly, but just enough to strike her finger across a jagged edge of tin.

Eddie helped her bandage the wound. She winced as he bathed the cut in iodine.

"Anyway," she murmured, "This ought to be proof."

"Proof? Of what?"

She held up the finger. "Blood," she said succinctly. "Not ink. Remember?"

He nodded. "You sure do gain your points the hard way, though. And before I forget—thanks for getting your office to square that forfeit bond for us. You didn't have to, you know."

"Forget it," she said.

BUT Eddie Cavalier found he couldn't forget it—completely. Twice he caught himself looking up at her when she wasn't aware of it. There was something disturbing about the set of her blond, curly head. He had seen a more beautiful woman, but he couldn't recall one with as much spark.

She was the kind of girl, Eddie thought, who probably had a dozen or more guys clattering up her doorstep. Guys with a lot of dough and a lot of spare time to spend it. Guys who played polo, maybe, and belonged to two or three country clubs. Guys who had a little blue in their blood.

Murder Ring in N. Y. Is Disclosed

Vengeance Sought by Prosecutor for His Brother

A year ago a murder ring was uncovered in Philadelphia. Police estimated upwards of 100 persons had been poisoned or bludgeoned to death—for insurance. Eighteen of the 21 persons arrested have been convicted and pleaded guilty. Now a second crime syndicate, very different from the first, has been uncovered in Brooklyn, New York. This is its story.

By TOBY WILANT
AP Feature Service Writer
NEW YORK — A young hoodlum, Anthony (The Duke) Maffelore, fledged on a chair in front of Brooklyn's district attorney, William O'Dwyer.

He was in a tough spot. He had been indicted with two other gangsters for a killing. O'Dwyer and other officers talked to him.

Gradually, Maffelore became convinced that his pals were double-crossing him—that they planned to let him take the rap and bribe their way to freedom.

While he raged at the thought, the officers reminded him that O'Dwyer, when a judge, had shown leniency to his brother.

So the Duke himself began to talk. Then he persuaded another young hoodlum to talk. Soon half a dozen others were "singing" in hopes of saving their skins—and O'Dwyer was declaring.

"I have an idea the electric chair is going to be working overtime in catching up with justice."

For the Duke's babbling had put O'Dwyer on the trail of Murder, Inc., a crime syndicate. The district attorney's office announced, that had:

1. Killed at least 35 persons—some for as little as $3 a job.

2. Participated in "almost any racket you can name—prostitution, extortion, intimidation of business."

3. Operated as far west as Los Angeles—"there is evidence that out-of-town gangs paid New York gunmen to help them murder people while they were visiting in New York."

"It wasn't a question of money that made these punks kill for a few dollars," O'Dwyer says. "It was fear of what their own kind would do to them if they didn't follow orders and kill."

Thus, fear made possible the operation of Murder, Inc., and fear was responsible for its disintegration.

The syndicate killed in numerous ways. One victim was stabbed to death with an ice pick; then, a slot machine and a 40-pound rock were tied to his body, which was tossed into a lake. Another victim was shot in the back. Another was mowed down by bullets as he walked from his home by bullets as he walked from his home toward the subway. Another was hauled to death. Another's body was bound with sash cord and set afire with kerosene.

Fear of another kind gave O'Dwyer one of the most important "breaks" in the case.

Mrs. Abe Reles, wife of a vice-president of Murder, Inc., told O'Dwyer her husband would talk.

"I want to save Abe from the chair because a baby is coming and because of our 5-year-old son," she explained.

For 17 years Little Abe Reles—or Kid Twist, as he preferred to be called—had been a notorious hoodlum in the Brownsville and East New York sections of Brooklyn. He had led various gangs of thugs. He had begun his crime career at 13 and been arrested 41 times. Convicted seven times he had served sentences on only four of the convictions.

Once a judge described him as "more vicious than Dillinger." Now, pushed by his wife, he joined the district attorney's "singing school."

Exactly what Little Abe told O'Dwyer probably won't be made public till the trials of the members of Murder, Inc. But the prosecutor hopes to nail higher-ups through his disclosures.

O'Dwyer says the gang, killed on a contractual basis for such criminal master minds as "Lucky Luciano," imprisoned Manhattan vice king, and Louis (Lepke) Buchalter and Jacob (Currah) Shapiro, racket overlords.

One of the syndicate's victims was shot to death by mistake. He was Irving Penn, 42-year-old music publishing house executive. He lived in the same neighborhood with, and vaguely resembled, Philip Orlosky, who had many connections with Buchalter in garment-industry racketeering. Penn was mowed down July 25, 1939, as he walked from his home toward the subway.

O'Dwyer's a fighting Irishman who vowed to clean up the Brooklyn underworld after three gun-men killed his brother in a cafe holdup in January, 1934. He took office last January after a career that began when he pounded a bent as an immigrant cop.

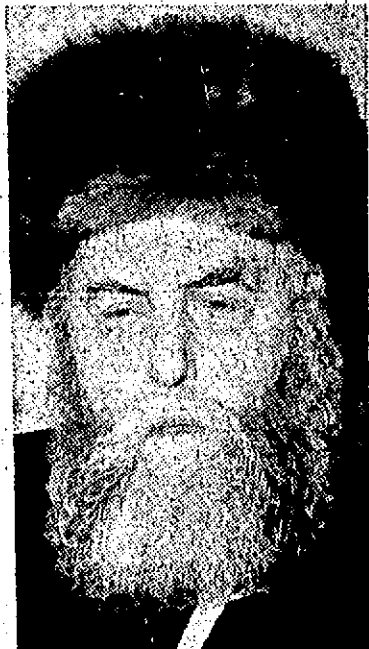

O'Dwyer believes it will be several weeks before the whole mob, including the "higher-ups," is rounded up.

When he came into office he said he was told by a state police inspector that farmers in an area north of New York City were "scared to plough their lands these days because they're afraid of uncovering a body from Brooklyn."

This epidemic of murder rings which has the police going around in circles, winds up as another argument for the straight and narrow.

rector, announced that 75 school districts had been checked, that in about 50 per cent of these the records had not been kept accurately and that "in a small percentage of those represented by the 50 per cent there had been record padding."

The investigation, which is continuing, was ordered last month by Governor Carl E. Bailey after several school leaders turned to the administration for relief, declaring many schools would have to shorten terms unless additional moneys were provided from the fund.

To meet the situation, the state board of education March 9 increased allocations from the equalizing fund about $220,000 by hiking daily attendance from $17 to $18, and the allotment per child transported more than two miles to school from $11 to $12 in eligible districts.

At that time the board found that there had been irregularities in the reporting of attendance records by six districts participating in equalizing fund payments. Governor Bailey said this might have resulted from "an honest misinterpretation of the equalizing aid rules."

Floyd emphasized that the department's investigation indicated that deliberate padding was at a minimum and that the discrepancies in records of many districts were the result of "negligence."

Oldsmobile Has Two New Models

One Is An Eight-Cylinder Convertible Coupe

Two new convertible models, embodying the many brilliant styling features of the popular Custom "8" Cruiser series, are announced today as additions to the 1940 line of Oldsmobiles by C. L. McCuen, general manager of Oldsmobile. The new models include an eight-cylinder convertible coupe with automatic top control and a streamlined convertible phaeton. Both models have an overall length of 210 1/2 inches and both feature Oldsmobile's eight-cylinder 110-horsepower engine.

"Like the closed models in the Custom '8' Cruiser series, the new Oldsmobile convertible models are long, low and wide," said McCuen. "These characteristics contribute immeasurably to the streamlined design and smart appearance as well as to the riding qualities and performance of the new convertible models," he added.

Front seats are sixty inches wide and the seats in the rear of the coupe as well as the phaeton provide plenty of room for passenger comfort. A large storage space for luggage and spare tires is provided under the rear deck.

Upholstery options in the new convertible models include leather in a variety of colors to harmonize with the many body colors available. Tan Bedford Cord is also offered as a cloth upholstery.

Included in the long list of features of the new convertible coupe is the automatic top control which reduces the task of lowering the top or raising it to move a button on the instrument panel.

The top itself is substantially the same as a hand-operated top and the mechanism of the control is simple and positive in operation. Cylinders have been concealed in the body of the car, one on each end of the rear seat.

The cylinders are connected to an air-tight vacuum system which leads to the engine manifold. The side bows of the top are linked to the pistons in these cylinders.

The control valve on the instrument panel is a spring-centered valve with a push-pull action, which always returns to a neutral position when released. When the control button is pulled outward, the vacuum is directed to the bottom of the cylinder, causing the piston to retreat, and pulling the top down. This action is reversed to raise the top. When pushed inward, the spring-centered valve directs the vacuum to the top of the cylinder, causing the piston to rise and the top is pushed up.

The petition asserted the trial atmosphere was "far from the prescribed judicial calm."

Mrs. Henry was described as a "tigress" in arguments after testimony that she shot Joseph P. Calloway, 42, Houston, Texas, salesman, as he knelt naked in a rice field, begging for his life and a chance to see his daughter graduate from college. Calloway had given a ride to Mrs. Henry and a companion, Finnon Burks, 23, still to be tried.

The ne wtrial petition specified that Spectators made "motions by running their hands across their throats under their chins to indicate that defendant should be 'hanged,' while jurors were being selected.

Passersby made similar gestures when the jury was going out for meals.

During the proceedings and in other instances idlers remarked within hearing of the jurors, "hang her."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely.

Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse any thing else.

Fight Centers on Bertrand Russell

Philosopher's Sex Views Stir Up Colleges

AP Feature Service.
Denied a post in the City College of New York on the grounds that he "has taught in his books immoral and salacious doctrines," Bertrand Russell, the famous British philosopher, has started a court fight for vindication.

Many Women Relieved

Headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain, and other periodic distress of women may be due to functional dysmenorrhea from malnutrition, a condition often helped by CARDUI. Main way it helps is by increasing appetite and flow of gastric juice; thus aiding digestion; building resistance to periodic distress. The other way CARDUI may help you: Take it a few days before and during "the time." Used and popular for more than 50 years.

advised sexual matters only in so far as they are part of the general problem of human conduct, and has spent most of his time exploring abstract subjects.

Russell has written many books and articles dealing with logic, higher mathematics, languages, the philosophy of religion, of psychology, of mathematics, of education, of history, of the state. At present he is working on a book on art and language. At least one of his works, "Principia Mathematica," written in collaboration with Alfred N. Whitehead of Harvard, is considered one of the world's great books.

Despite his interest in abstract philosophy, he has a down-to-earth program for human behavior. "In human beings," he says, "three things seem to me particularly desirable. They are: Scientific method, friendly feelings, and an interest in life and the world." He does not regard moral codes as infallible or faultless and believes it is the business of philosophy to strive to improve them. He was born on May 18, 1872, of noble English stock. Although a member of the British peerage, as Earl Russell, of Kingston Russell and Viscount Amberley, the philosopher prefers to be known as plain Bertrand Russell.

What He Preaches—
"Nationalism is undoubtedly the most dangerous vice of our time, far more dangerous than drunkenness or drugs, or any of the other vices against which a conventional moral education is directed."

"With the economic independence of women, marriage as it has existed since men took to agriculture is likely to end." "I shall not teach that faithfulness to our partner in life is in any way desirable, or that a permanent marriage should exclude temporary 'episodes.'" "Americans should indulge in marital infidelity to preserve their homes."

"The arguments in favor of a great degree of freedom of education are derived not from man's natural goodness but from the effects of authority, both on those who suffer it and those who exercise it. These who are subject to authority become either submissive or rebellious, and each attitude has its drawbacks. What is wanted is neither submissiveness nor rebellion, but good nature and general friendliness both to people and to new ideas."

"Able young post-graduates in America seldom have the breadth of culture or the sheer extent of education that is to be found in the same class in Europe, but they have a love of knowledge, an enthusiasm for research and a freshness for intellectual initiative which in Europe has usually given place to a bored and cynical correctness."

What He Practices
Russell was sentenced in 1918, to six months in a London jail for a crack that the American army "will no doubt be capable of intimidating strikers, an occupation to which the American army is accustomed at home."

Divorced from his first wife in 1921 after he had been charged with adultery, Russell remarried. He and his second wife were divorced in 1935—he was again charged with adultery. In 1936, at the age of 64, Russell married his secretary. At present, the Russells' family consists of Bertrand, the youthful Mrs. Russell, two children by his second wife, one child by the first.

Carrying out some of his educational ideas, Russell established an unusual school in Hampshire, England. There the youngsters came and went as they pleased, attended classes when the spirit moved them, did and said whatever they chose, ran around nude in warm weather. The school didn't make money, however, and conservative parents avoided it.

In 1933, Russell came to America to lecture at the University of Chicago. Later he switched to the University of California at Los Angeles, where he teaches mathematics and philosophy. Next, he is scheduled to lecture at Harvard. He was supposed to begin a two-year stay at C. C. N. Y. in January, 1941, teaching logic and the philosophy of mathematics and of science. A court, however, voided his appointment.

Loyalty
A member of the faculty in a London medical college was appointed an honorary physician to the King. He proudly wrote a notice on the blackboard in his classroom:

"Professor Jennings informs his students that he has been appointed honorary physician to His Majesty, King George."

When he returned to the classroom in the afternoon, he found that someone had written below the notice, this line:

"God Save the King."

Catapults of the cross-bow type were invented by Dionysius, the tyrant of ancient Syracuse, in 399 B. C.

TOUGH TONE TAKES TOWN

Franchot Tone is tough and so, apparently, is Lenore Ulric in "The Fifth Column."

By TOM WOLF
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK — From Hollywood,

Broadway looks like a hick talent farm, occasionally developing dramatic ability for Hollywood to snatch.

From Broadway, Hollywood appears as a false, gilded stage, set against which any happy combination of feminine curves or any tall dark 'n' handsome ham can romance, regardless of ability, while such talent as does exist is constantly miscast.

As this jealousy fight is waged back and forth every so often one coast strikes a damaging blow. This season's first round went to Hollywood, which produced such superb character-movies as "The Grapes of Wrath," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Come With the Wind."

But the second round is Broadway's. And the man, who tossed the telling punch is none other than Hollywood's Franchot Tone.

Given First Role to "Limber up"
Tone started his career true to the old Broadway-to-Hollywood success formula. Getting his early experience as a charter member of the Group Theater, he went west and became another "golden boy" of the films.

Last season Tone returned to Broadway and the Group. He was immediately cast in a virile role as the flashy gangster in "The Gentle People." A dynamic and powerful Tone appeared here and there in his characterization, but certainly he was no new man.

Hollywood smiled. Broadway said nothing, thought of "The Gentle People" as the rinse necessary to wash off the sticky sweet from Tone's movie character. Now he was ready for THE part.

Franchot, They Say, is Now a Man

He got it recently in Ernest Hemingway's at-long-last produced "The Fifth Column." Primarily, the play is a character study of a high-strung American working as a Loyalist counterespionage agent in Madrid during the Spanish Civil War. Tone brings to the character of Philip Rawlings all the real virility talent in an idealistic man forced face to face with the sickening disillusion of modern war's treachery and brutality.

"Today," unanimously sung the critics, "Franchot is a man."

Mr. Tone's case is not unique, although it outshines all others of the current Broadway season. Within the past two years, at least four very glamorous ladies, neglected or maltreated by the movies, have appeared in Broadway roles which have added appreciably to their theatrical stature.

The Broadway-Hollywood feud continues, as it probably always will. Actors who feel they are miscast in Hollywood will always return to Broadway to get themselves re-identified in the public mind. And moviegoers everywhere may continue to thank Broadway for re-discovering some of the biggest box office stars.

Rifle Inventor Is Hot Against Army

Always Slow to Accept Anything New, He Declares

WASHINGTON — Note to Readers: No city in America, not even New York, presents such personalities as the nation's capital. Senators, ambassadors, cabinet heads and kings; thugs, bums, lugs and ministers; and princesses and queens; soldiers, sailors, D.A.R.s; lobbyists, lawyers, literary roustabouts, Presidents and apes—all are here. To know what makes the wheels of Washington go 'round, perhaps it can't be done, but let's try.

Melvin Johnson . . . 31 and 6-foot-4 . . . part-time lecturer in law at Boston university . . . former member and coach of the Harvard crew . . . is inventor, patentee, and head man of the company that makes the Johnson semi-automatic rifle, which threatens to explode in the middle of the congressional fight about the 1941 appropriation for arms for the U. S. army.

A handsome, volatile, 200-pound giant, Mel shot his first deer in Maine, when only a spindly youth of 12, with one of the army's famous old Springfield rifles. He never got over the thrill of it.

Before he was well into his teens, he was an expert skeet shooter . . . a few years later, captain of both the Harvard R. O. T. C. field artillery, he progressed from reserve marine corps lieutenant in 1936 to captain in 1938. He became a life member of the National Rifle association.

His 26th year (1935) found him poring over blueprints for a blow-back type semi-automatic rifle. It was a flop. But a year later, he was dodging out of the Boston courtrooms as the first hint of recess . . . to work half the night on his "short recoil" semi-automatic rifle, which basically is the Johnson rifle of today.

In the last year or so, he has been adapting it for mass production, demonstrating it here and abroad . . . practicing law . . . and hanging up the amazing record of having fired something like 80,000 rounds of 30-caliber ammunition . . . And finding time to invent and patent a 12-pound machine gun. A list of his articles in the Marine Corps Gazette and Army Ordnance Magazine would take a couple of pages.

He knows almost all there is to know about the history of small arms in America. He tells, endlessly, fascinating stories about the battle of the rifle-makers to win recognition for their guns.

He knows why the army was slow to admit that a breech-loader was better than a muzzle-loader . . . How black powder killed thousands of U.

I'm Wrong—Hooray!

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A motorist reported excitedly to police his automobile had "hit a woman." Officers hurried to the scene. The "victim" was a dummy, clad in skirt, hat and sweater. Children had suspended the dummy by strings in the street.

Eye Catcher
Mrs. Brown took her husband to a mannequin parade. An evening gown worn by an extremely pretty model attracted her attention.

"That would look nice at our party next Saturday," she said, hoping her husband would buy it for her.

"Yes," agreed Mr. Brown. "Why not invite her?"

Sincere

A Scotchman says that he recently received some birthday cards, two of which were from insurance companies, wishing him many more birthdays. He said, "I appreciate these cards. I know they are sincere."

S. Troopers in the Spanish-American war, because the Spanish were using smokeless and semi-smokeless powder . . . and could see but couldn't be seen . . . Why Custer's stand was a LAST stand, because the Indians had better guns) . . . How rifle barges were laid down in the World war.

With words popping like shots from one of his own machine guns, he'll demonstrate the effectiveness of his rifle . . . apologize for his apparent bloodthirstiness and explain with graphic lunges and trigger-clickings how he could dispose of five enemies with bayonet and lead, before they even had time to hands-up.

Johnson storms at what he calls the short-sightedness of the Army ordnance division . . . gnashes his teeth over what he claims is just plain old red-tape . . . And then on the day before the promised explosion over semi-automatic rifles is scheduled to blast congress, he goes home to Boston. He's got a law class to teach.
